AN 200: CULTURAL ANTHROPOLOGY

Dr. Usha K. Prasad

Class Meetings: Monday, 1630-2040, Pearl Harbor

Texts: Cultural Anthropology, 2nd Ed. 1997, by Richard H. Robbins

Course Description: In the most broadest sense anthropology is the study of humankind. This course is designed to provide an introduction to the subdiscipline of cultural anthropology, or the study of humans as cultural beings. Culture is unique to humans and cultural anthropologists are interested in comparing the similarities and differences which exist among human groups; this is known as the cross-cultural perspective. The readings and videos provide examples of how similarities and differences in behaviors occur in all aspects of all societies throughout the world. Culture is presented as a complex and dynamic mechanism by which human beings adjust to the variety of environmental and societal demands posed by existence. Culture is defined as a system of concepts, ideas, values, attitudes and beliefs which is learned and shared within a human group. It is: 1) used to make things, generate behaviors and interpret experiences; 2) a way of thinking about and looking at the world; 3) symbolic and ideational; and lastly, 4) culture is adaptive, changing to meet the needs of life's various circumstances.

Course Format:

The instructor will present materials from assigned course readings and other sources in a lecture format, while also encouraging students to participate in discussions. Lectures will also be supplemented by videotapes; these will be announced throughout the course. Students are expected to read all required materials before coming to class.

Course Objectives:

1. to develop a greater awareness of the role of culture in human existence.
2. to increase our understanding of the similarities and differences existing amongst and across cultures and societies.
3. to gain a better understanding of ourselves as social beings who are completely reliant on learned and shared behavior.

Requirements and Grading:

The final course grade will consist of two (2) exams; an in-class, oral presentation (topic to be chosen with instructor's consent); and class participation/attendance. Exams are based on lectures, reading, class discussions and videos. The second exam will not be cumulative. Attendance is mandatory for this class. Please note that absence from 2 class periods is automatically reported to the Registrar. The following shows the breakdown of the grading system for this course:

Exams	30% each (a total of 60%)
Oral Presentation	30%
Participation/Attendance	10%
	100%
