GOALS AND OBJECTIVES :

The course of study is an introduction to architectural history and design philosophies with an emphasis on the architecture and interior design of the Twentieth Century.

The objective is for the student to gain a general understanding of architectural theory, architectural models and the stylistic influences of recent historic periods.

The major works and careers of important twentieth century American architects and Interior Designers will be explored , along with their philosophies of design. European influences and global trends will also be part of the course.

Interior design of the twentieth century will be examined as it complements the architectural trends.
